A tuple in Python is an ordered, immutable collection of elements. It is similar to a list, but unlike lists, tuples cannot be changed after they are created (i.e., they are immutable). Tuples are defined using parentheses `()` .